A model for TransCommunication (TC)
by Rolf-Dietmar Ehrhardt

After long-standing study of the phenomena in the EVP field and in ITC in general, I came to the conclusion that there must be principles behind the diverse results received by different experimenters. Much and perhaps everything that takes place probably has an explanation. Also in this field the basic principle is valid: you can not create something out of nothing. Nevertheless the question is: Are there common characteristics for these different results in TransCommunication? I believe it is the resonance between similar or identical thought structures or states of consciousness which makes a communication possible. Please bear with me during my attempt to set up a verifiable model.

Starting position of the experimenters:

After observing the experimenters in the fields of EVP and ITC, I believe it is reasonable to carry out a certain division into different personality types of experimenters. These types distinguish mainly through their experimentation behavior, which is also an expression of their attitudes concerning this phenomenon, and they distinguish also in the achieved results and the procedures used while experimenting. A typical experimenter might have qualities of two or three of these personality types in their own personality make-up.

- Mourning Experimenter
  This type represents an experimenter who does not permit himself other thoughts than those related to the deceased loved one caused by the strong emotional attachment to that person. This experimenter is strongly focused on his desire to get in contact with that loved one in spirit.
  It makes a big difference whether it is love or fear. For example, a surviving wife might fear economic or emotional hardship as a result of her husband's death, or she might fear her own death. If fear represents the main motive, unpleasant situations can occur. (See "How can I avoid unpleasant situations"). Experimenters that undertake the contact experiment from love and attachment can expect pleasant results, although it may take time to achieve a contact.
  This experimenter is mostly very tolerant opposite the results of others and knows that the result depend much on himself. Although he does not know how the contacts are accomplished he chooses the right way: he is focused because of his situation.
  In the beginning these contacts are mostly of relatively good quality, but decrease more and more in quality, duration and frequency, unless this type of experimenter becomes a "systematic experimenter".

- Spontaneous or Impulsive Experimenter
  This person wants to get many good voices, even fragments of sentences or words, regardless of the content. He is not interested in background information and doesn't care how, why, why not different, which connection is there?
  If an experimenter of this kind learns that another experimenter achieved good voices with a specific device or a device combination, he soon duplicates these devices, buying the necessary equipment to receive these same good voices. In case he has success with these devices only once, he modifies immediately again in order to better the results again. Every preserved signal and voice fragment is analyzed and interpreted, to find any connection with something. He speaks in this case also about "science", "scientific approach", "critical point of view" and so on.

That is the way people act who call other experimenters liars if they achieve good and even better results while approaching the whole matter from another point of view (for example, the spiritual way rather than the technical way).

- Systematic Experimenter
  This experimenter has studied the relations between spiritual conditions and results of the experiments. He has transferred his knowledge, earned through experience, into daily experimental work. If these experimenters should still have a surpassingly high mediality, highly amazing results are to be achieved then.
  If this experimenter succeeds, holding his ego in check, he can set up remarkable results and (if the reader wants it) also findings for mankind.
  This experimenter is exposed to extreme attacks since the achieved results are put down as fraud, delusion or mischief mostly by other ones.
  Mostly it is envy which leads to these attacks. Because as soon as the voice critics receive the same or similar quality (even it is only a fragment), these are represented immediately as the ultimate results of a new experimentation technique and praised in the highest. The critics act this way although they drop back a short time later again onto the old result state. Because otherwise they would have come much further in quality, duration and frequency of voices.

These different types of experimenters have existed from the very beginning of the EVP/ITC scene. A tolerance of the other experimenters and their results is practiced rarely. As a matter of fact there are also mixed types. Those individuals are possibly changing and evolving from one type to another.

The mourning experimenter is less interested in the quarrels and more interested in reassurance that there is life/existence after physical death.

The systematic experimenter with his mostly overriding results withdraws after sad experiences and gives insight into the results of his contacts to at best a small group of people.

The experimenter acting spontaneously is interested mostly in finding out who has voices recorded so that he can test also something new as quickly as possible.

With the model to be introduced now I would like to add a small contribution to peace and order among the experimental groups. The principle that conceals itself behind everything can be nevertheless transparent. If we want to approach the phenomenon of the EVP/ITC we should be open for new approaches. Because the results of previous procedures cannot satisfy completely. In this sense I ask you to read my model with open heart and discerning mind!

Definitions:

- Experimenter
  a human being who tries to get in contact to entities in beyond.

- Human being lives on the earth and is equipped with body, soul and personal spirit.

- Quantum Entity
  Living personality that is beyond our perception possibilities since we are equipped only with 5 senses.
  People with extraordinary perception abilities (ESP, or extrasensory perception) can observe these entities, both optical and audible.

  These "beings in beyond", that must incarnate still again, that are therefore energetically seen still "dense" near the earth, are meant here with this denotation. Entities having this stage of consciousness or vigour field do not distinguish considerably from the people here on earth. Of course they do not have any dense physical body nor illnesses now.

  There are also other types of entities inhabiting a "region" (stage of consciousness) of pure spiritual nature. It requires mediums with special capabilities for those "ethereal" entities to contact us here on earth.

Different ways and types of communication:

There are many possible modes of communication: verbal and nonverbal, between communication partners of one or different state of consciousness. Let me first present distinct ways of TransCommunication separately, but please keep in mind that in reality, a typical case TC involves a mixture of these types. (Different colors show different types.)

Human being <==== Entity

Information is transmitted continually from the entities to people on earth. The human being must be in the position to receive this information to be aware of it. Then this information becomes conscious by influencing the human spirit. The person's spirit then converts this intellectual vigour so that it can become effective in our world of 3(4) dimensions. The information is sent in pictures/ feelings and other typers of impressions and must be transformed by the human spirit. The quality of transformation depends also on the person's intellectual and linguistic capabilities.

This transformation is prone to mistakes, of course, depending on the abilities of the human being. In the case of ITC the spirit of the human being converts the intellectual vigour so that it can manifest itself in our world through technical equipment. All imaginable variants during the transformation are possible: Computer, video, tape, fax, etc. The individual structure of the human being with his abilities previously mentioned determines the kind and the quality of the transformation.

This description concerns people who are in waking consciousness, not those who are in any stage of trance.

Human being ====> Entity

Information of the human being is sent via thought, a form of "vigour" (see the Definitions).

Cases in TC have been reported in which the answer of the entities were received before the question was asked.

Which entity will receive the thoughts of a human being who is willing to communicate? Certainly an entity with similar thought structures.

Dissimilar thoughts do not reach the entity at all. If this is true, then the thoughts of the human being who wants to communicate decide who we will address in beyond. Thoughts of human being and entity have to be similar before a communication can take place.

Entity <=====> Entity

Entities exchange information with compatible entities, as we in this world do. There are many entities with different thoughts and interests. The entities can communicate with each other using the language they used on earth. This language can be foreign to us. Why should deceased Asians, for example, communicate in German?

Communication among entities can take place by thought -- telepathically. Entities with compatible thoughts and interests are in touch with each other and can communicate. If an entity changes its interests (and therewith its thinking) then it is in contact with other entities instantly, because it is not restricted by physical limitations.

Here on Earth, we humans have to search first for a corresponding group of like-minded persons. The distance can be a big hindrance in this case. Entities, however, are immediately with other like-minded entities in beyond in contact by thoughts.

Human being <==> Human being

People communicate with each other verbally and nonverbally. If verbal communication occurs voluntarily and spontaneously, then the people with each other who are on the same wavelength and have the same "chemistry" communicate mostly with pleasure. Expressed differently: Like attract Like. This is resonance (see "Definitions").

Telepathy, silent mind-to-mind communication, is of short duration and occurs spontaneously when one person thinks or feels with intensity about another person, who receives the information, at least in fragmentary form because of a certain receptiveness.

It has been speculated that intense thoughts powered by strong emotions "hang around" freely as energy (see "Definitions"), waiting to find resonance with a person of like-minded thoughts. Meanwhile, the person with an appropriate thought structure is wondering where these ideas are coming from.

In reality, verbal and nonverbal communications occur simultaneously, and there is no clear separation. Vocal communication is subject to the laws of physics. The speaker has to be close enough and speak loudly enough to be heard by the listener.

There have been some interesting experiments carried out suggesting that distance is no obstacle to telepathic communication. Astronaut Edgar Mitchell, for example, experimented with communicating partners on Earth while he was coming back from the moon.

To take a step closer to truth we must admit that there are no clear boundaries between forms of communication. Regardless of who is communication with whom in what manner, all communication can be viewed as thought structures.

Human being <==== Entity	Human being ====> Entity

Structures of thoughts

Entity <===> Entity	Human being <==> Human being

The thought structures are the common element of all forms of communication. A person turns to different communication partners frequently, and he does so by changing his thoughts.

In the world of the entities there is no time, and there is no limitation with regard to speed. If an entity desires something, that reality becomes current immediately, limited only by the stage of consciousness the entity has. Entities face certain limitations. The desire to be God suddenly will not work. The desire determines what the entity can cause.

If it enjoys frightening people here on earth, then it will search for human beings with thought structures prone to fear. Therefore Transcommunication is not harmless for the unprepared human being (see "How to avoid unpleasant situations"). An anxious human being attracts fear-inciting entities. The person's fear is enabled by his thoughts. This destructive situation is made possible by resonance in a most unpleasant way.

Some consequences:

- Thoughts are one form of Energy (see "Definitions").
- Thoughts are the glue between the partners in Transcommunication: the human being and the entities.
- For thoughts there are no limitations with regard to time and space.
- When I am thinking, I send energy that can be received not just from entities but also from human beings.
- If that partner who received my thoughts is interested in communication, then a communication can take place. I as the partner on earth must train myself in order to send and to receive messages in a right way.
- When my thoughts are not stable, caused perhaps by lack of concentration, then it might happen that I "listen" to a conversation that takes place between entities alone. It can be seen in EVP as short, unclear and unrelated words. I don't stay "tuned" to a certain structure of thought.
- "Thought hygiene" is important not just in ITC, but in our daily life. That is also important in our daily life. There is a basic rule which says: one should think only that which one hopes and wishes will become reality immediately (which happens in beyond). Thoughts are one type of energy. Theosophy and spiritualism agree.
- Applied to EVP and ITC, thoughts are energy, and energy has the capability to change something/someone. Many recordings of poor quality, short duration and poor clarity must have reasons, because there are recordings of good quality. The reason in most cases is that there is no communication taking place. Instead of communication between partners we only eavesdrop on communication between invisible partners.
